Job Environment

Sullivan County prohibits and will not tolerate any form of sexual harassment in the workplace. Sexual harassment is defined as unwelcome and uninitiated sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature, jokes or any other display of written, or offensive pictorial material from the same or opposite sex that may contribute to an unfriendly or hostile environment.

Any employee who feels they have been unlawfully harassed shall report promptly to their supervisor, dept head/elected official or the Human Resources Department. Sullivan County will investigate every complaint immediately and in a discreet manner and will disclose information only on a need to know basis.

Any employee who violates this policy will be subject to disciplinary action, which may include termination. No employee will be subject to any form of retaliation for good faith reporting of sexual harassment or participating in an investigation.

While emergencies are not commonplace, they must be anticipated through crisis intervention training and managed appropriately.

On occasion incumbent may be dispersed throughout the community when transporting inmates to and from work release details, medical visits, or court visits. While emergencies are not commonplace, they must be anticipated through crisis intervention training and managed appropriately.

Duties at this level are predictable, with the application of a variety of provisions of correctional management techniques, conflict resolution, and of learned techniques assisting the incumbent in unusual circumstances. Incumbent must be aware of the conduct of human behavior, especially of persons acting under stress. Correctional management techniques must be followed, but they do not cover all aspects of correctional work. Hence, incumbent must rely upon experience, and the advise of superior officers to assist in difficult situations.

Errors made could result in personal injury or loss of life, delay or loss of service, monetary loss, injury to other employees, damage to buildings or equipment or legal liability.

The incumbent has frequent contact with the public through meetings with inmate family members, volunteers, and community groups. Other contacts are typically with the courts, Sheriff's department, other correctional facilities, and probation, social service and other counseling officials. Contacts occur in person, through use of the telephone and other communications equipment and writing.

Supervision

Incumbent reports directly to Corporal and must perform duties as assigned, on a daily basis. The incumbent does not supervise others. The supervising officer is always present. Routine functions are performed independently following established facility policies and procedures. Work is reviewed daily or more frequently and through weekly meetings and an annual evaluation. Questionable cases are referred to the shift officer

The incumbent has access to information pertaining to criminal investigations and records of resident population.

Work volume fluctuates due to criminal activity, changes in law or state requirements. Work changes can generally be anticipated, except in emergency or crisis situations. Incumbent generally works on a fixed or irregular shift as required, either day, evening or night, holidays and weekends.
